10. Type your manuscript in precisely the same format as that currently required by the journal selected under (7) above.
9. Select a title for your paper including as many as possible of the key words under which you hope the work will be indexed, but hopefully not exceeding about 10 words.
8. Write the initial portion of the Introduction. This should provide both appropriate background information for the readers you selected under (7) above and an explanation of why you undertook to discover the things you actually did discover.
7. Choose the journal in which you wish to publish your paper with a view to reaching the audience(s) that will be most interested in your research. Read the instructions to authors for the journal you select to be sure your research can be adapted to the requirements of the journal.
